Mr. Gillette, who had lived in this town over four score years, will be greatly missed. As deacon of the church for many years, his constant thoughts were for its highest welfare. For many years he was tenor singer in the choir and teacher of the men's Bible class, in the Sunday school. By his removal a pillar of the church is

His occupation was general farming: he possessed also unusual me-canical ingenuity. This talent he de-veloped by building and equipping a handle factory on Noisy Brook, a short distance from his home. This branch of industry proved a profitable investment and it also made a market for many cords of domestic timber from the surrounding farms. A few years ago the mill burned down and was not rebuilt. His declining years were spent in retired life.
